Anthropology (ANTH) Minor

Anthropology is the study of human culture, biology, and social interaction across time and place. It includes the archaeological investigation of past and present human material culture; ethnographic study of contemporary cultures around the world and in the United States; research into human evolution and the origins of human physical diversity; and analysis concerning the origins, structure, and social use of language. A minor in anthropology provides basic training in three areas: an overview of anthropological inquiry, understanding of ethnic and cultural behavior, and understanding of a selected conceptual area in anthropology.

A minor in Anthropology (ANTH) requires satisfactory completion of the following requirements:

- Completion of properly distributed credit hour requirements for the Baccalaureate degree in effect when the student was admitted to their home school
- Completion of 15 credit hours, with a minimum grade of C in each course
- Contact the department once the course work is completed to complete the necessary paperwork to officially declare the minor

Minor Requirements:

Overview of Anthropology (6 credits):

_____ A 103: Human Origins and Prehistory (or A 303)
